The Porterhouse Gin Select

The quintessential British Gin and Tonic has seen a huge resurgence in popularity, with small distilleries popping up all over the country. We have selected a few of our favourites, all produced here in Scotland, for you to try. Which one will be your favourite?

Porter's Gin

A sharp, refreshing citrus blast hits you as you take your first sip. quite a short, drying finish leaves you wanting more. It's fantastic news that Aberdeen has produced a Gin with the quality to compete with some of the finest names around. Ben Irvani, one of the creators behind the Gin recommends a classic G & T, served with a quality tonic and slice of lime.

£3.60

Daffy's Gin

Named after the Goddess of Gin [yes there is one], Daffy's Gin hails from Edinburgh. It is certainly a classic Gin with a modern twist, combining classic Gin botanicals such as juniper and coriander with strains of lemon, created using French grain spirit. This is a clean, crisp and hugely enjoyable Gin. Served with mint leaf and lime garnish.

£3.60

Caorunn Gin

A London dry style Gin, containing 11 hand foraged Scottish botanicals found growing in the Distillery's estate in the highlands. A premium Gin served with red apple and lime. Caorunn gets Its name from the Gaelic for Rowanberry, which is one of its key botanicals, providing a sweet and sharp refreshing taste.

£3.60

Crossbill Gin

Created by Inverurie's own Johnathon Engles and colleague, Walter Mickelthwait in Aviemore. This premium, small batch Gin is a fantastic drink. Using only Scottish juniper and rosehip, A wonderfully simple Gin that gives so much depth. We recommend no garnish, just let the Gin talk for itself.

£3.60

Kirsty's Gin

Arbikie Highland Estate is the first farm-to-bottle distillery in Scotland. Named after, master distiller Kirsty Black, this Gin is a traditional juniper based Gin, but it is made from spirit distilled from home farmed Arbikie Potatoes. Launched as a super-premium Gin it is smooth, creamy and clean. Garnish with lemon.
